as we see it

His Excellency, the Ambassador of the Dominican Republic, Hon. Joaquin E. Salazar, has asked us to correct an error that appeared in a late July issue of TV GUIDE. We take this opportunity, not only to correct the mistake, but to voice a sincere apology to the Ambassador, and to the Dominican Republic, for unintentionally slighting that country.

Our story was titled: "How To Dance —And Pronounce—'The Merengue.'" The first paragraph read: "The merengue (a dance, not a pie) is danced, according to a native of Trinidad (where it originated) 'as though you were walking up a hill sideways with a ball and chain around one foot.'"

The "merengue" did not originate in Trinidad. It originated in the Dominican Republic, and, according to the Ambassador, has been danced there for more than a century. Documentary evidence he supplied, in the form of a Dominican Republic magazine article, lists among the popular "merengue" tunes, "Alevantate (Raise 'N' Go)" and "Comiendo Gallina (Eating Hen—Not Chicken—Hen)."

In checking to see how we mistakenly attributed a Dominican Republic dance to Trinidad, we found that the original story quoted a native of Trinidad, who was describing the dance. Later on in the piece, the writer had said that the dance originated in the Dominican Republic. An editor erroneously cut out the mention of the Dominican Republic and inserted the parenthetical phrase that prompted the Ambassador's letter.

It is indeed regrettable that the error occurred, and we are happy to publish what the Ambassador requested: "The necessary correction in the interest of accuracy and fairness."

Love That Television!

The Major Hollywood Studios Are Head Over Heels In New Shows

A studio-by-studio analysis of just what the major movie producers are up to these days is enough to make one wonder whether the Hollywood moguls are the same ones who never used to mention the word "television" if there were ladies in the room.

It all started, of course, with Walt Disney, whose incredible success with Disneyland forced the hand of the other studios. All by itself, Disneyland made a senior partner out of what had been a junior TV network, provided an unparalleled publicity platform for Disney's theatrical pictures (notably "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea"), won two "Emmy" awards and provided the Nation with a new hero and a new song hit, both named Davy Crockett. Disney put together 21 films this first season, 15 of which were repeated once; 10, twice. A new batch of shows starts Sept. 14.

Although Universal, which made TV films a couple of years ago and quit, is still gingerly testing the water, the 1955-56 season will see most of the majors take the plunge, with Warner Brothers and 20th Century-Fox making the noisiest splash.

Warners is following Disney right into the same network—ABC—with an hour-long Warner Brothers Presents film series scheduled for Tuesday nights starting Sept. 13. The show, with Gig Young as host, actually will consist of three series in one, each based on an old Warner hit movie: "Cheyenne," "Kings Row" and "Casablanca." Six minutes of each show will plug upcoming Warner movies and the shows themselves will be studded with young new faces, potential Warner stars of the future.

Besides doing that series, and setting up a unit to shoot regular film shows for syndication, Warners is dipping at least its little finger into its backlog of theatrical films to offer up around a dozen proposed TV film series, comprising old newsreel and short-subject films devoted to sports, children, animals and historical subjects. And last winter a large batch of its old "Looney Tune" cartoons went on the TV market.

Twentieth Century-Fox, long one of the holdouts from TV, is now doing a remarkably blithe about-face. It has turned an entire movie lot (home of such pictures as "What Price Glory," "Seventh Heaven" and all the Tom Mix films) over to TV production. A million dollars is being poured into the lot for refurbishing the 14 soundstages and buying new equipment.

Its first series, based on the Fox movie, "My Friend Flicka," is already in production and will start Sept. 30 on CBS Friday nights. Its second project entails 20 hour-long films for General Electric. To be called The 20th Century-Fox Show, it will alternate, beginning Sept. 21, with The U.S. Steel Hour on CBS. The films will include such remade movie properties as "The Ox-Bow Incident" (possibly with Fredric March), "The Late George Apley" and others.

Even M-G-M, the most aloof holdout from TV, has succumbed to network blandishments, quite possibly influenced by the choice continued time spot ABC offered—the Wednesday half-hour following Disneyland. The studio will compile a total of 44 films called The M-G-M Parade, consisting of shorts, cartoons, behind-scenes activities on the M-G-M lot and film clips of upcoming M-G-M movies. George Murphy will be host.

A veteran among the majors-in-TV is Columbia Pictures, whose Screen Gems subsidiary has been active in the TV film field since 1949, turning out commercials. In 1951 Screen Gems produced seven experimental Cavalcade of America TV films, and in 1952 got started on the Ford Theater series, which has introduced to TV films such movie names as Claudette Colbert, Paul Muni, Irene Dunne, Merle Oberon, Shelley Winters and many others. The unit is now producing, in addition to Ford Theater, such series as The Adventures of Rin Tin Tin, Captain Midnight, Father Knows Best, Jungle Jim, with Johnny Weissmuller; Damon Runyon Theater, Falstaff Celebrity Theater, You Can't Take It with You and three others.

Paramount, which owns a Los Angeles TV station, holds a controlling interest in Telemeter, the coin-in-the-slot subscription TV system, has an interest in the Du Mont organization, and has been active in the development of a color TV tube, recently concluded a deal with NBC whereby the studio will make its starlets, if not its stars, available to the refurbished Comedy Hour, along with film clips of its upcoming feature pictures.

Republic Pictures, original home of Gene Autry and Roy Rogers, has long used its sound stages for such film shows as Dragnet, The Ray Milland Show, G.E. Theater, City Detective and many others. On its own, under the banner of Studio City Television Productions, it turns out the "Emmy"-award winning Stories of the Century. It also has three new series in production—Behind the Scenes, Frontier Doctor and a third based on Sax Rohmer's "Fu Manchu" stories.

What does all this feverish activity mean to TV itself? Will the majors take over TV, as has been freely predicted in movie quarters, or will TV be able to retain its own identity?

A network executive, who prefers not to be identified, sounds this warning: "The movie people, who have been rather articulate in their criticism of the quality of television, are headed for a painful fall if they think they can waltz into this medium and use it as a proving ground for their untried young starlets. TV's time schedule, which demands that a show be on the air at the same time on the same day every week, calls for craftsmen who know what they are doing. Even Disney, an acknowledged genius, could turn out only 21 shows for his first season in TV."

That Nasty Old TV!

A man brought into an Oklahoma City court pleaded guilty to abandoning his wife and child. He had an explanation: he couldn't go out to work because he spent the whole day watching television.

Television cameras were set up outside the prison cells in the Houston, Tex., jail. Guards who watch the screens say that while there's little change in the cast and practically no dialog, the program "has improved prisoners' behavior." The prisoners are not quoted on the subject.

A Memphis judge awarded a divorce to a woman who accidentally blocked her husband's view of the TV screen. The husband indicated displeasure by throwing a chair and holding her head under water.

A couple in Estherville, Iowa, aren't going to be so secretive when it comes to buying gifts for each other this Christmas. Last year each bought a surprise TV set for the other—from the same dealer.

The chief of a volunteer fire company in New Jersey resigned because TV undermined his men's morale. "I had to go out to one fire all by myself," he said.

A judge ordered the jury at a murder trial in Doylestown, Pa., to avoid watching TV crime shows while the trial was in progress. Defense attorney had complained "private eye" shows might influence the verdict.

BUD COLLYER AND ROXANNE
TELL YOU

How To Beat The Clock

Every week Bud Collyer and Roxanne receive hundreds of letters from their constituents. A few of these bear irascible messages urging them both to get out of town in a hurry. But most of the letters are from people who simply want Bud and Roxanne to tell them how to beat the clock on Beat the Clock.

You really can't blame the folks for wanting to know. To contestants who can master the CBS show's intricate stunts, Collyer and Roxanne give away from $600 to $1000 in TV sets, pop-up toasters, waffle irons and electric blankets every time Beat the Clock goes on the air. And for the solution to their weekly bonus trick, they have gone as high as $3200. No wonder resourceful citizens seek tips on how to snag the loot.

Is any "inside information" needed? Not really, Bud and Roxanne agree. Nor is any special talent involved.

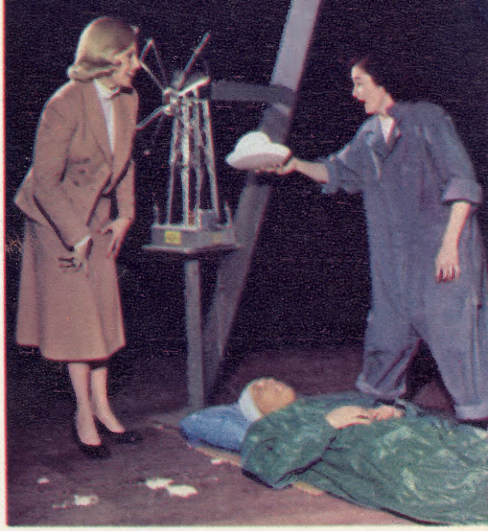
"All a fellow needs to Beat the Clock," says Bud, "is durability—and a taste for whipped cream."

However, here are some of the things you might keep in mind in the event you're ever picked to race that minute hand on Beat the Clock:

Take it easy: "Don't rush things," says Collyer. "If you have 50 seconds for the trick, don't try to do it in 10."
Figure it out: "Don't swing until you 'see the ball.' But if you miss it once, you still have another chance."
Pay attention: "Had a fellow on the show once," Bud recalls, "who didn't listen closely when I explained the trick to him. Result: he ran right into the banana cream pies, instead of waiting for the pies to run into him."
Don't get nervous: "Nervous people are undependable," says Roxanne—a little nervously. (Seems everybody on Beat the Clock is haunted by the dread that someday some nervous contestant is going to catch the juiciest pie and hurl it right back.)
Keep smiling: Sometimes it's difficult to smile through a snootful of whipped cream, Roxanne admits. But try, anyway.

Collyer takes an active part in concocting the tricks used on Beat the Clock. In this pursuit he works with Frank Wayne and Bob Howard, his idea men. All three are perfectionists. To make sure a gag is workable, Collyer, Wayne and Howard always try it out on professional actors before they use it on the show.

Actors are expendable, they hold. But you can't replace people.



Roxanne watches testing of stunt in which wife had to grab pies before windmill plopped them on hubby.

Rehearsal convinced Roxanne and Bud that lifting whipped-cream-filled balloons with teeth could be done.

TV's Answer To Marilyn Monroe

Cover Girl Barbara Nichols Finds She's In Great Demand

Although she's only 23, Barbara Nichols already has had more fun than almost anybody.

She has danced in a chorus line, sipped champagne with a Pan-American president, posed for a calendar, thrown pies at Jerry Lester. She's been a cover girl on 50 magazines, a night club dancer and a stripper in a movie. Now she's a TV actress. And plenty of times she could have had a yacht.

"Well, practically, anyhow," she says. "Some men are always trying to give me things."

Barbara, who may be seen at intervals on Caesar Presents, is a blonde of impressive proportions. She's 5 feet, 7 inches tall, weighs 120 pounds, has long legs and several other interesting attributes.

She has cat-green eyes and a slow smile. In short, she's the kind of girl a fellow's liable to bark at in the street. Sometimes it's embarrassing.

"I can't help it," she says. "I don't do anything. It just seems to happen."

Barbara has a high, tinny, little-girl-from-Brooklyn voice and an easy-going disposition that somehow doesn't fit her vampish figure and face. She is completely unaffected and as friendly as a politician on election eve. She doesn't seem to worry about anything —with the possible exception of men.

"Men," she muses. "Sometimes I don't understand them."

Barbara has a lot of trouble with men at cocktail parties and in the back seats of taxis. In public gatherings men instinctively gravitate toward her, often leaving their wives and girl friends in sizzling isolation. "But it's not my fault," she insists. "It's men."

Her career began in 1949, after an uneventful childhood spent in Jamaica, L.I., when she answered an ad "for a couple of dancers." The choreographer looked at Barbara and stopped the music.

"Never mind dancing," he said. "You're hired."

Barbara had been engaged to join a troupe of American chorines booked for an engagement at the "luxurious Hotel Jaragua." The party would leave by plane, she was told, the following morning. Operating under the illusion that the hotel was located "near Atlantic City," she went home, packed a toothbrush into an overnight bag.

The next morning she awakened at Ciudad Trujillo, capital city of the Dominican Republic, a mere 1550 miles from home.

After her initial surprise, she adjusted herself in short order. "It was wonderful," she remembers. High government officials threw several cocktail parties for the American girls.

Six months later Barbara was prancing around in the chorus line at the Latin Quarter, a Manhattan night club. "Sometimes I was a can-can girl," she recalls. "And sometimes I just came out and stood around on the stage holding a twig."

Along about this time Barbara made her debut as a pin-up girl. In the ensuing five years she appeared on the covers of more than 50 magazines and posed for the Esquire Calendar of 1951. Inside the magazines, she posed for articles on such subjects as "The Vanishing Swimsuit," "The Case of the Substitute Husband," "The Girl in the Death Cell," and "How Hot Can a Night Club Get?"

Barbara made her TV debut in 1949 as the successor to the redoubtable Dagmar on Broadway Open House, with Jerry Lester. She was supposed to be the stooge in Lester's magician act. "He would pull these tricks that never came off and I'd just stand there, feeling kind of silly. Once in a while I was supposed to throw a pie at him or something."

In 1952, she was picked for a one-line part in "Pal Joey." The line was, "Can I recite now?" And she said it so well that the director took all the other chorus girls' lines away and used them to build up a little part for Barbara.

Through the years her parts in TV have assumed a definite pattern. On The Mask she played a murdered stripper. On Studio One she was a dumb blonde. On Danger she was a night club singer. On Circle Theater, Pond's Theater and The U.S. Steel Hour she was cast to portray a succession of sweater girls, hat-check girls, chorus girls and movie starlets.

Six months ago Sid Caesar assigned her the part of a well-proportioned maid in one of his "Commuter" sketches. Warner Brothers producer Frank Rosenberg saw her on the show and signed her for the role of the stripper in his film "Miracle in the Rain." Then Caesar signed her again for his summer replacement, Caesar Presents. And now it appears that everybody's after her.

"I don't know," she says. "Seems like when anyone wants a body, they reach for me."

Pittsburgh Dateline

Wayne Griffin

Josie Carey

The Pitt Stadium crowds are still talking about the great guitar work Joe Negri, who heads the trio on the Buzz 'n' Bill Show, did for the "Too Darn Hot" number in "Kiss Me, Kate" . . . Bill Brant drives his opponents stark, staring mad on a golf course with the time he takes to line up every shot . . . The Duquesne Brewing Company is building Steubenville's Red Donley into a real, local personality on the KDKA-TV Time Out series . . . Those kinescopes Josie Carey and Fred Rogers made of their Children's Corner for distribution to all of the country's educational TV stations were the program's passport to that NBC deal. The contract calls for them to replace the vacationing Paul Winchell for four Saturday mornings, 10:30 to 11, beginning August 20, and after that the network and Josie and Fred, who have been both Pittsburgh's and educational television's No. 1 success story, will sit down together and talk turkey.

Local girl Mitzi Steiner McCall certainly hit the jackpot the other week-end. She was on Max Liebman's Spectacular, "Svengali and the Blonde," Saturday night and came right back 24 hours later on The Variety Hour . . . Even politicians who are pretty reticent seem to open up when Bill Burns interviews them on his telecasts. Burns has that kind of a way about him . . . Jack Durant at the Ankara made that Miss Pepperdine pilot film with Marie Wilson and will have one of the leading roles in the series if CBS ever peddles it.

There never has been a more popular fellow on television around here than Wayne Griffin, so KDKA-TV scored a ten-strike in getting him to head up its new morning show from 9 to 10 daily, Monday through Friday. The program, which should be teeing off around Labor Day, will supplant Jean Connelly's Home Edition, among others, but Jean stays on at Channel 2 to produce the Griffin hour.

CALLING ALL TIMS

If some Pittsburgh actor between the ages of 17 and 21 is lucky enough to win the role of Tim in Dr. Hudson's Secret Journal in the Tim-TV GUIDE hunt, he's already assured of being seen on his home town station. For KDKA-TV has just sold the series, based on the novel by the celebrated author, Lloyd C. Douglas, to the Sun Drug Company for a weekly run starting this fall.

Remember, the time is growing short; the contest closes on August 31. The rules and entry blank appear on the next page, and TV GUIDE has arranged with the George Heid Studios, Club Floor, William Penn Hotel, to make the recordings, which must accompany every entry, for only $1.50. The regular price would be $5. Appointments can be made with Heid by calling GRant 1-3696, and contestants must mention the Tim-TV GUIDE hunt in order to receive the reduced rate.

Maybe Pittsburgh will turn up a new TV star. It's a golden opportunity for a young actor, and may the best man win.

In all, five semi-finalists will be flown to Hollywood for screen tests, and the winner will receive a contract to appear in at least three episodes in the Dr. Hudson series.

DIALOG

This is the dialog to be recorded. The scene is as follows:

TIM WATSON, a disconsolate young man with a high-school education and a secret desire to be a doctor, has been befriended by DR. HUDSON, after having been caught burglarizing the doctor's home. TIM's father, a veterinarian, is dead. So is his mother. He does not get along with his stepfather. DR. HUDSON has just told TIM that he, HUDSON, will put him through college and medical school but that no one must know. HUDSON starts toward the door . . .

TIM: Doc!

(HUDSON pauses. Tim speaks with difficulty.)

TIM: Look—I got to say something, Doc. I loved my Dad. I guess I got the ideo of being a doctor from hearing him talking obout how he'd wanted to be one. I thought he would have been the greotest—and it made me sore that he didn't have the chance. But it's not the same deal, Doc. I've seen you now—and I know that Dad . . . (he gulps). He didn't want to get up in the night . . . and he used to go fishing sometimes when he . . . He wasn't a fighter. But I sure loved him . . .

(He turns away—beyond words.)

TIM: You said about growing up—every time people said my stepfather was wonderful, I hated him. When he went out of his way to do something that—oh, that he thought he ought to do—even when he didn't like it—I hated him. When he wos so good to my mother, and made her rest and everything—I guess I was just growing up. I just didn't want to think that my Dad . . . But, Doc, I loved him . . .

True Story

Please tell me if The Big Story, telecast by Channel 6 on June 17, was true. It concerned a blind and deaf couple who had a child. The story of their everyday life seemed to me to be almost impossible.—Patricia Kenney, McKeesport, Pa. [The Big Story of that date, entitled "Born—a Son," was a real-life drama that occurred in February, 1955.—Ed.]

Dunninger's Thought

Of which U. S. president was Dunninger thinking the night of July 16? The storm the following Saturday night blacked out Channel 6, and I didn't learn who it was.—R. B., Uniontown, Pa. [President Andrew Jackson.—Ed.]

Attention, Kind Sponsor

Can't something be done about opera on TV? Frankly, if sponsors can back such programs as "Svengali and the Blonde" and others of that sort, surely some kind sponsor could be found to back more operas. I am 15 years old and would certainly love to hear some good music and see some outstanding musical shows on TV. I am sure there are many viewers as interested in opera as I am.—Frances Folino, Ellwood City, Pa.

He's No Svengali

Two of my friends tell me that there was good humor in "Svengali and the Blonde." Being no Svengali myself, I lacked the magic ability to appreciate it. Brother!—Hal Shane, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Stations reserve the right to make last-minute changes.

It isn't right for that Alberghetti family to have so much talent. They were only great—all five of them, papa, mama, Anna Marie, Carla and tiny Paul—on The Variety Hour with Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy. And when, oh when, is Bergen going to get his own show? Soon, I hope . . . I'm waiting for the day when some emcee asks the audience "are you enjoying the program?" (like Ed Sullivan) and everybody shouts back "no!" . . . Windows has been coming up pretty regularly with good ones. I thought "The World Out There" was Grade A . . . I hope poor Ethel Barrymore wasn't suffering as much as the commentator on the dismal "Svengali and the Blonde" as I seemed to think she was. What a shameless waste of such a gold-plated talent!

Charlie McCarthy

I thought Guy Mitchell was the best of the pinch-hitting masters of ceremonies on Toast of the Town while E.S. took a vacation . . . I'm afraid the summer replacement shows on the whole aren't any better this year than they were last season.

The more I hear of Perry Como's upcoming hour-long Saturday night shows, the better they sound, especially now that I understand Goodman Ace has been signed as the producer and Jonathan Winters, who is so good as the warm-weather George Gobel, will be the featured comic . . . The Science Fiction Theater series has been slipping badly of late. Even the worst B movie is better than the last one I saw, "The Strange Case of Dr. Lorenzo." Not even my favorite character actor, Edmund Gwenn, could do a thing for it . . . Frankie Laine's doing a first-rate job for Arthur Godfrey. His variety show is entertainment-plus . . . Gore Vidal has turned out a lot of fine dramatic scripts for television but "The Death of Billy the Kid" on The TV Playhouse wasn't one of them. The script even made that excellent actor, Paul Newman, look bad, and that isn't easy to do.

I hear that a great many people are up in arms at the hour-long plug The Variety Hour gave "Pete Kelly's Blues" the Sunday night Jack Webb emceed it. What are they complaining about? Webb gave the viewers a fine program, so what if the movie didn't get any the worst of it? I'll take a plug like this all the time . . . I trust the sponsors who simply couldn't see the Hume Cronyn-Jessica Tandy series, The Marriage, last summer know now, after the Cronyns' brilliant television production of "The Fourposter," what they passed up . . . Groucho Marx's session with that 97-year-old Dakotan who got left behind by General Custer's Army was a priceless few minutes. The old man amused me mightily and he touched me a bit, too.

Those Whiting Girls

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

On its own merits, Those Whiting Girls should be one of the best-liked programs of the summer season, with a chance of finding a sponsor for the winter. But with situation comedies in general going out of favor, this show just isn't superior enough to have much chance of lasting.

It's the summer replacement for I Love Lucy, done by the Lucy people and with all the slickness of a Lucy production. And it's sparked by the Whiting Sisters—Barbara and Margaret—who play themselves, and Mabel Albertson, who plays their mother.

Margaret, an able singer, and Miss Albertson team up to cope with Barbara's adolescent romantic problems; or Barbara and Miss Albertson plot to marry older sister Margaret off—all this against a Hollywood background.

Unfortunately, there just isn't enough that's new or funny to keep the program on the air for very long.

Do It Yourself

With the do-it-yourself craze probably the most widespread fad to ensnare this country since the yo-yo, it's not surprising that this summer brought forth a Do It Yourself TV show. Co-starring Dave Willock and Cliff Arquette, the program will probably entice those viewers who have a workshop fitted out in their basements. But for all other viewers (and we're certain they outnumber the do-it-yourself-ers), such a show can be good only if it's entertaining. And this one isn't.

Actually, Willock and Arquette are the subjects of a minor fad themselves. They had a daytime TV show several years ago, and Arquette played the janitor on Dennis Day's program season before last. Viewers either liked them immensely or couldn't take them at all. And that's the way they turn out on Do It Yourself. There probably are people who like their attempts at homespun humor. But, frankly, we're afraid most people will find them a bore.

Willock, the chief demonstrator, is handy with a drill-press. But how long can you watch a guy cut holes in a piece of wood?—R.S.

FINE TUNING

By Ollie Crawford

Television baseball series proposed for Leo Durocher. Something like "What's My Line-up?"

Since the show is about a manager, they'll have to start with a pilot film.

So far, the boys are only batting around ideas. They figure a baseball show just may catch on. It seems the producers know all about the success of "Damn Yankees," and Leo knows all about the success of the "darn Dodgers."

One possibility would be a quiz show for Giant fans called, "What Happened?"

There is also the idea of a panel show in which four umpires try to out-talk manager Durocher. This is the toughest assignment for the boys in blue since Bull Run. The only other show where Leo comes out roaring is "M-G-M Presents." The show would be designed to prove whether the thumb is mightier than The Lip.

It isn't much of a show for gags, but the umpires may insist on one.

The last such idea was to adapt some stories by that famous baseball writer—Homer.

Mel Blanc Is Better Known As Rabbit, Pig And Skunk

One voice, two bodies: Blanc as Blanc and Blanc as Tweety, a bird!

Mr. Melvin Jerome Blanc is a gentleman who needs no introduction but who is always getting one, anyway, because the invisible part of his personality is so much better known than the rest of him. That's Mel's voice, which is also the voice of Jack Benny's Maxwell car, Porky Pig, Bugs Bunny, Woody Woodpecker and a French skunk, Pepé Le Pew.

So important has Mel's voice become since he used to bedevil Portland, Ore., high school teachers with his Woody-Woodpecker laugh that, at any time in the last 20 years, a simple case of Blanc sore throat could have crippled 95 percent of the Warner Bros. cartoon output, knocked a hole in The Jack Benny Show or deprived Musical Chairs (a local Los Angeles show that just went network over NBC) of one of its three stars.

Mel not only can imitate anything, but does—to the tune continued

of $50,000 a year. Working in Walt Disney's "Pinocchio" a few years ago, he was paid $800 for one hiccup, the only thing left of a cat's dialog after editing. Jack Benny's writers, a creative group given to outbursts of fraternal sadism, delight in writing sounds into the script they don't think anyone can reproduce; but so far Blanc has risen to all these crises. Once the Benny script contained the cryptic direction: "Mel whinnies like a horse (English horse)." Unaware that it was a gag, Mel ended a routine horse whinny with an equine "Haw!" so unmistakably British that the old radio bit has been revived for Benny's TV show.

Mel insists that all the 97 comic characters he has created are the natural issue of his own vocal chords, except for an occasional children's record spun fast or slow by Capitol engineers to produce a special effect for tot album buyers. Basically a musician—in 1930 he was the Nation's youngest (22) theater pit orchestra conductor—he developed his genius for creative mimicry by singing novelty songs with various dance bands around Portland, while doubling on tuba and violin.

In just the reverse of what most people think, all the cartoon characters Mel has voiced—Bugs Bunny, Daffy Duck, Woody Woodpecker, Tweety Bird—are drawn by the artists from the voice mannerisms he first supplies on tape. He says Yo-semite Sam, a fairly recent one, was the hardest to devise. Sam, a Western roughneck, is only two feet tall, and because he is tiny, Blanc made the mistake of giving him a soft, Western drawl. Finally, after weeks of doing "Sam" quietly in the shower and on his way to and from work, he leaned out the window of his car one day and yelled at an obnoxious driver in the loudest Yosemite-Sam voice he could command.

"It turned out to be just the ticket," he says. "Volume was what Sam needed."

Of all his characters, and Blanc lapses into them on cue as one of his chores as panelist with Johnny Mercer and Bobby Troup on Musical Chairs, he says Bugs Bunny is his favorite. "Bugs," he maintains, "does things everyone wants to do, but represses. When he kicks little old ladies and then says, 'Ain't I a stinker,' that's me." Pepé Le Pew, however, is the only one who gets fan mail—all of it from women beguiled by the seductive quality of his Continental overtones.

In spite of the fact that Mel's best work remains invisible, he is generally recognized wherever he goes, thanks to television. Believing that he was anonymous, though, has led him into some interesting situations. Once he struck up a conversation, in character, with a talking parrot at Catalina Island zoo and was squelched by the parrot, who glared at him and remarked: "Oh, a wise guy, huh?"

"I felt terrible," Mel says, "until I found out it was part of his act."

The Search GOES ON

This is Howard, a 'lone wolf' and juvenile delinquent, as he was seen on The Search.

A New Lease On Life Looms For Program That Studies Man And His Many Problems

Back in 1952, CBS began to dream about a new program, to be called The Search, based on outstanding research projects being done by leading universities. One network visionary said it would be "the most ambitious and productive effort yet undertaken in the field of educational television." The official prospectus described it as "a search for truth . . . but also a search that leads us down strange new pathways to greater understanding and better living for all."

After two years of planning and preparation, The Search made its TV debut on Oct. 17, 1954, with a visit to Dr. Wendell Johnson's renowned speech clinic at the University of Iowa. For the following seven months The Search probed university laboratories and classrooms, police stations and slums, mountain caves and mines. Though it never found a sponsor, it built an audience of 10,000,000 and drew rave reactions from critics and educators alike.

Soon The Search will end—at least, for a while. The 26 episodes originally planned have been completed, except for reruns of some of the more outstanding stories as summer fillers in the See It Now spot.

But The Search is not over. A new series is being planned, with the same title and format. No date has been set, however, as a great deal of time is needed to prepare it.

In many ways, CBS officials feel, the network's old proud dream already has been fulfilled. One of the best examples of The Search's penetrating study of Man and his problems was its program on juvenile delinquency in Detroit.

The program explored case histories of two boys, first taking Sonny, 12, who had stolen a pair of gloves from a department store. After questioning the boy and establishing that he was definitely a good risk, the city's Youth Bureau concluded that drastic corrective action would do him harm and released Sonny to his family.

Viewers next encountered Arthur, 8, brought in for breaking windows. In the course of a psychological examination it was made clear that Arthur was mentally ill. The Juvenile Court's Psychological Clinic recommended that Arthur be given therapy.

Another example of the "savable" delinquent shown on The Search was Larry, the boy gang-member, product of a broken home. He is now in a boarding home, where his school marks are improving, and he's looking forward hopefully toward rejoining his own mother some day.

The fourth—and perhaps potentially the most dangerous—delinquent was Howard, the "lone wolf," a boy who couldn't get along with anyone, who kept getting deeper into serious trouble until he wound up in Juvenile Court. The judge, realizing the hopelessness of Howard's life in a home atmosphere of squalor, hate and violence, had Howard transferred to another environment entirely.

The juvenile delinquency program was in many ways typical of the shows filmed by The Search, according to Irving Gitlin, producer of the show. "In it, we used the direct and simple documentary approach. We told a story through the eyes of its participants. It took us two months to research this show, several weeks to tape-record the interviews and two weeks to shoot the film."

First, Gitlin and his staff tried to produce The Search by building up Medic-like dramatic interest in the shows. They shot several films with actual plotlines and built-in suspense.

"But we found that, for us, this technique didn't work at all," Gitlin recalls. "We discovered that you have to shoot straight drama or straight documentary. You can't successfully combine the two. So we threw out all the film and started over again."

Two years later, when the first Search film was released to the public, the program's title card described the show in words recalling Gitlin's own: "This is The Search—the search to know and understand Man and his world—the search for a richer, happier life for all."

This concept has reached far beyond the original series. The documentary approach has become the backbone of many new programs, such as Let's Take a Trip. And major documentary films on broad, national issues—done by The Search crew, using The Search techniques—will carry on the idea.

The Cisco's Kids

A TV Star Of Wild Westerns Rules Out Violence In Raising His Own Children

What does the Cisco Kid do when his own children misbehave? Just sends out an S.O.S. for a brother cowboy, Roy Rogers! "They'll listen to him and behave—for awhile, anyway," he confides. "And it's all the more funny because I'm the one who can get Roy's kids to mind."

The movie and TV star spoke, of course, not as the courtly Robin Hoodish character who scourges the wicked with the help of the clowning Pancho (Leo Carrillo); but as Duncan Renaldo, Spanish-born actor, linguist (11 languages) and father.

The Cisco's kids are Stephanie, 14; Jeremy, 10, and Richard Lee, 8. They're pleasant youngsters, friendly, relaxed and unspoiled, and Renaldo hopes to keep them that way. For instance, he has them perform small tasks around their Encino, Cal., home for their spending money. Stephanie mows the lawn. Jeremy rakes it. Richard picks up the twigs.

Although Renaldo frequently goes on tour to meet his young fans, he tries to spend as much time as possible with his own children. Nonetheless, Richard has complained on occasion, "We only see you on television!"

Renaldo's concern for the welfare of his children is reflected in The Cisco Kid. Killings are avoided, violence kept to a minimum. And Renaldo plays down blazing guns in the stories he tells his children, their friends and the hordes of youngsters who turn out for his personal appearances.

He selects true stories that will point up the dangers of greed or of breaking the law. He does not want his listeners making idols of swaggering gunmen of the Old West.

"Many times," he says, "I related a story about how the young Teddy Roosevelt made a gun-swinging bully back down. But I do not tell it to children anymore. I realized that Teddy's action, brave as it was, might suggest a dangerous game. For Teddy showed up the bad man, Bart Lawson, by bluffing him with a game of Russian roulette."

Cisco's favorite Western hero is Joe Miller, of the famous 101 Ranch.

"For," he tells the kids, "Joe, without shooting someone dead, stopped a fierce war with the Indians. He made both sides see that peace was best. He told the whites, 'The Indian hurts like yourself and he laughs like yourself. Treat him like a brother.' And both sides prospered.

"Joe and his brothers re-erected an Indian trail-marker near Ponca City, Okla., as a tribute to a chief who 'led his people to civilization and favored the white man's ways.' Joe was a lifelong friend of Chief White Eagle, and was adopted into his tribe.

"It was Joe who went to Washington and won for the Indians the oil lands that made them rich. Joe also built the wonderful 101 Ranch Show. He used gunpowder only to entertain. People like Buffalo Bill came to be a part of it. And at the end of the trail, Joe Miller gave everything to his state. Best of all, he left a happy people.

"Joe is a Westerner to admire. Remember, he never shot a man!"

Cisco's kids are attentive audience as Papa displays skill with a bull whip.

And another story-with-a-moral:

"Little ones," says Cisco, "a long time ago there was a rich Spanish settler near Old Santa Fe who held mortgages on all the ranches.

"When he was dying he burned all the mortgages. Everybody was happy. But the people on the land and his greedy sons both fought to keep it. Some of the land is still being fought over. So you see, even in doing good, there's a right and a wrong way."

With such temperate advice from such a colorful father, it 'ud seem that Cisco's kids just won't hardly need that Roy Rogers, no more.

Prince Philip Plays TV Critic; Ben Lyon Chides Bebe Daniels

NEW YORK . . . I'm just back from Europe, where I looked into foreign TV. I understand that Queen Elizabeth's Philip does a good deal of looking, too. His equerry (the officer who looks after his impressive stables), Michael Parker, has a sister, Mary, who's on TV. Recently Parker phoned her agent and said, "Mary's hair looked terrible on that last show, because of the lighting or something. Better correct it." The agent asked, "Is that your opinion?" "Yes," said Parker, "and the boss thinks so, too!"

■ Two former American movie stars —Bebe Daniels, who was one of Ralph Edwards' This Is Your Life subjects, and her husband, Ben Lyon, who gave Marilyn Monroe her name—appear with their children on a program tagged Life with the Lyons and are probably the most quoted couple in England. On a recent show, Ben said to Bebe, "Let's face it, dear; we're not kids any more, are you?"

■ Sometimes the English gags get Godfreyish. Jimmy Edwards, a popular comic, said, "I find women a difficult problem." "So do I," replied Dick Bentley, "but they're the sort of problem I like to wrestle with!"

■ Paris' oldest daily interview program opens with everybody standing in front of a bar—drinking, if they wish. Imagine that in Kansas!

■ Italy's big star these days, the New York-born son of an Italian lawyer, used to appear on New York radio station WHOM back in 1945. He's a Godfrey-Garroway-Steve Allen type of kidder and uses the TV name "Mike Bongiorno." Translation from Italian: "Mike Good Morning."

■ Danny Kaye, a favorite with the British, has had floods of TV offers back home, but feels he should hold out for another year or two . . . Tourist Red Buttons was told by a friend, "See? The rainy weather in England isn't so bad. You're freckled and sunburned." "That's not sunburn," said Red. "It's rust!" . . . Back home, Joey Adams claims that his favorite song is "Hymie's Hideaway." "You mean 'Hernando's Hideaway?'" he was asked. Joey retorted, "No, Hymie bought him out."

HOLLYWOOD Dan Jenkins reports:

CBS wants GINGER ROGERS to do NOEL COWARD's "Dancing on Air" as a "spectacular" -- for $50,000 . . . DISNEY is now planning a feature film, "The Great Locomotive Chase," with FESS PARKER . . . PARKER, incidentally, can be seen in a Dragnet rerun as a policeman, playing his entire scene kneeling on the floor--to avoid towering over JACK WEBB and BEN ALEXANDER.

JONATHAN WINTERS, comedian on the GEORGE GOBEL summer replacement, And Here's the Show, will be a regular on The Perry Como Show on NBC in the fall . . . The GOBEL show, incidentally, will be seen on 25 Canadian stations next season.

NBC's new hour-long, five-a-week dramatic show, Matinee, will employ 10 directors, 100 writers, 4000 actors -- and $100,000 a week. All in the bright new name of daytime TV . . . TV film over the past six years cost $304,000,000, to which can be added another $93,000,000 for next season's output.

Movie Museum, the film series based on vintage silents, will be shown in the Nickelodeon Theater at Disneyland Park -- doesn't that amount to pay-as-you-see TV? . . . BOB HOPE will do a Christmas TV show on film.

MAX LIEBMAN plans to repeat some of his Saturday night spectaculars, those shows which appeal to children ("Babes in Toyland," "Heidi"), on the following Sunday afternoon -- if time can be cleared . . . He also is planning two half-hour comedy shows, one to star BUDDY HACKETT; the other, PAT CARROLL.
